The Arcane Academia Newsletter by Dr Angela Puca

Hello Symposiast,

It's been a busy week! As it always is in Angela's world!

So, where do I start?

The first big news is that my book on Italian shamanism and witchcraft has passed peer review, and Brill sent me the contract to sign. Haven't signed yet, so perhaps next week, I may have an update on that!

Another good news, though I can't reveal too many details for the time being, is that Harvard University asked me to give a public lecture and asked my permission to record it and upload it on their website! 🌟

There's a lovely and talented professor at Harvard, Giovanna Parmigiani, with whom I've had the pleasure of collaborating. So, I was super happy to get that invitation. I'll keep you posted over here!

Another piece of news is that I opened my Ko-fi page! One of my patrons suggested that, and I realised it's a pretty flexible platform for people who want to support my project because it allows one-off donations and monthly subscriptions and offers of services (like lectures and tutoring). So, if you fancy being my very first supporter on Ko-fi, the link is here! ➡

RELIGIONTUBECON!!! 🎉

When I met Filip, Justin and Zevi in Sweden on the occasion of the ESSWE conference, Justin proposed to us to try and bring our online project into the flesh, organising a big event/conference in New York.

We asked Andrew to join us as well and created the little group that we call ReligionTube. We didn't come up with the name. Apparently, a few viewers used that term to refer to our lot, and so we decided to take it on!

Now, we're still at the very early stages, and we've just posted a poll on our YouTube community tab to test people's interest and whether you'd like to see this event come to fruition.

We're still assessing all the practicalities and costs and are discussing starting some form of crowdfunding if there's an interest from people to meet us in person and attend a big Religious Studies conference with us five as speakers.

The idea was also to have a couple of informal events where each of us can meet their community, but - as mentioned - we're still early on in the organisation and any feedback from you guys (on the YouTube post) would be appreciated!

This is it for this week. I'd really appreciate it if you'd share my work (anything you love) so our symposium can flourish.

Until next week, stay tuned for all the academic fun and the Arcane Academia, of course! 🎓

Coming next in my Inner Symposium...

Magus Lecture on Sunday 20th of August at 4 pm UK time. Topic: UFO narratives in religion, spirituality and esotericism.

Zoom gathering with all patrons on Sunday 27th of August at 4 pm UK time.
